Gabriel Stone Mott

Congratulations!

Gabe, you have been making us proud for so many years and we are so excited to see you take this next step on your journey to become a screenwriter! You began writing your stories, "The Adventures of Gabe", at the age of four. But you did not stop there! Next, we found out that you had worked with the school librarian to add your books to the library collection (complete with codes), so they could be borrowed and enjoyed by all the children in the school. This was you at four. By third grade, you had a written series called "Clash of Kings", featuring characters made up with your friends. Little did we know, this was your first screenplay. You insisted we turn it into a movie, and those DVD's are still floating out there! During your high school years you have performed alongside Oscar nominated stars, written a play, and a screenplay. We never know what is next, but we always know it will be great! You see the world, and you see opportunity. You are a storyteller and a visionary. We love you and can not wait to see what you create next!

Love, Mom, Papa and Ticket

Gwendolyn Robinson

Dear Gwen

As a child, you watched over Ellie and your friends and made sure people were being kind and respectful. You had brave conversations with bullies and thoughtful conversations with the adults around you. As you continued to grow, your curiosity allowed you to see the world with open eyes. Your creative mind, scientific curiousness, and mathematical calculation gave you the willingness to try new things and go into uncharted territory. You are an athlete, a scholar, an artist, a volunteer, and a well-rounded member of society. And here you are, ready to graduate from high school, and your insight, kindness, and razor sharp wit will take you anywhere you want to go. We wish you happiness and love in your one and only life. Have confidence that your strength and grit will help you overcome the hardships that life brings. You have become a unique and beautiful person, on the inside and out, and we couldn't be prouder. We love you so very much - just as you are.

Love, Mom and Dad
